

To: McAlear, Christopher[cmcalear@blm.gov]
From: Ratcliffe, Robert
Sent: 2017-05-31T08:12:43-04:00
Importance: Normal
Subject: Re: National Moments: The Landscape Version
Received: 2017-05-31T08:13:13-04:00

how was Iceland - are you attending any of the partners outdoors thing today and tomorrow at south interior?

On Wed, May 31, 2017 at 7:59 AM, McAlear, Christopher <cmcalear@blm.gov> wrote:

thanks Bob! What room are you in? I heard you had moved to MIB

On Wed, May 31, 2017 at 7:41 AM, Ratcliffe, Robert <robert_ratcliffe@nps.gov> wrote:

another newsletter related to larger landscape conservation

----- Forwarded message -----

From: Living Landscape Observer <bbarrett@livinglandscapeobserver.net>
Date: Tue, May 30, 2017 at 1:35 PM
Subject: National Moments: The Landscape Version
To: bob_ratcliffe@nps.gov

May 2017

In This Issue What's in a name: The National Monument Version Virtues of Good Government Looking for Detroit's Urban Landscape In the News About Us	<h2 style="text-align: center;">Living Landscape Observer</h2> <h3>What's in a Name? National Monument Version</h3> National Monuments were once an obscure protected area designation. Today they are a big story in major news outlets. Reporters are visiting Bears Ears, Grand Staircase - Escalante, and Papahānaumokuākea Marine National Monuments in record numbers. What put the designation in the headlines? A decision by the new administration to undertake a review of all National Monuments created since January 1, 1996, with a specific focus on those over 100,000 acres. The spotlight on this venerable program has, in turn, led to some misconceptions about public lands and the role of the federal government. Lets look at the history and management of monuments in more detail. Read the full story here.
Upcoming Events

ICOMOS General Assembly
December 11-15, 2017
Delhi, India

National Trust for Historic Preservation
November 14-17, 2017
Chicago IL

Featured Voices

Rather than feature one voice, this month we are featuring more than 120,000!

Follow this link to read thoughtful and passionate comments submitted to the Secretary of the Interior regarding Bears Ears National Monument.

The comment period for Bears Ears NM has ended, but you can still share your views on the other monuments being reviewed. Learn more about the Department of the Interior's process here.

Featured Landscapes

The Virtues of Good Government

In this piece, originally published in the May 2017 issue of the George Wright Forum, guest observer Rolf Diamant explores the significance of National Monuments to the National Park system. He profiles Fort Monroe National Monument, located in Hampton, Virginia, as an important example of how monuments have played a key role in expanding the depth and breadth of the stories interpreted at park sites. Read more.

Since 2012, we have profiled close to 50 landscapes varying in size from historically significant city centers to multi-state, even multi-region, conservation efforts.

However, there are large swaths of the country (and the world as well), that we have yet to highlight. Would you like to contribute to the Living Landscape Observer? Write a piece or suggest a landscape for us to include by contacting the editors.

Looking for Detroit's Urban Landscape

Over the past century, Detroit has served as a bellwether for the broader American economy, with its factories, many of which now stand vacant, offering tangible evidence of the county's booms and busts. Detroit's landscape is a complex text, offering insight into the rise and decline of American manufacturing, the after-effects of WWII, the Cold War, the Vietnam War, racism and classism. The city also has a rich cultural heritage that is still visible and vibrant. Read about one student's experience seeking this heritage as part of the George Wright Society's Park Break program, which in 2016 focused on implementing the National Park Service's Urban Agenda. Join her in a journey of discovery.

Latest News and Information

Does the current political situation make you feel like you need to say something? Then here are two opportunities:

- June 12 - Due date for comments on the White House review of federal agencies, which solicits public "ideas and suggestions on how the government can be better organized to work for the American people." More information.
- July 10 - Due date for comments on Department of Interior's review of all National Monuments except Bears Ears NM. that comment period has already closed. More information.

One recently created National Monument under review is in Maine, the Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument. Learn more about this landscape through a short video introduction.

Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument

Budget Cuts - Speaking about the NPS Budget

"This budget proposes unprecedented reductions," says Denis P. Galvin, an advisor to the Coalition to Protect America's National Parks, and a former Deputy Director of the National Park Service. "One has to go back to World War II, when the parks were largely shut down, to find comparable reductions." Read more here.

DOI Landscape Program zeroed out

An ambitious, science-based Interior Department program aimed at improving conservation efforts across federal, state, tribal and private lands is on the chopping block. Read the Living Landscape Observer article on the program here.

Critics say the move to gut the $13 million Landscape Conservation Cooperative (LCC) program seems to undermine Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's stated goals to improve and increase coordination across federal bureaus working on conservation. More.

News Flash: Landscape scale work is not faring well.

About Us

The Living Landscape Observer is a website, blog and monthly e-newsletter that offers commentary and information on the emerging field of large landscape conservation. This approach emphasizes the preservation of a "sense of place" and blends ingredients of land conservation, heritage preservation, and sustainable community development. Learn more about how you can get involved or sign up for the newsletter here.

Living Landscape Observer, Rudy Road, Harrisburg, PA 98103

SafeUnsubscribe™ bob_ratcliffe@nps.gov

Forward this email | Update Profile | About our service provider

Sent by bbarrett@livinglandscapeobserver.net in collaboration with

Try it free today

--

Christopher McAlear
Assistant Director
National Conservation Lands and Community Partnerships
(W) 202-208-4731
(C) 775-722-9539